Conference Updates and Online Registration: www.iapa.ca/iali

IALI Conference 2007 hosted by

In cooperation with

IALI'S INTERNATIONAL CONFERENCE APRIL 18-20, 2007

Why should you attend?

"FROM COMPLIANCE TO HIGH PERFORMANCE" promises to be the International Association of Labour Inspection's most successful conference ever, with a number of "firsts." It's the first time this conference is being held in North America; the first time it is being held in conjunction with a national occupational health and safety event; and the first time IALI members will be offered opportunities to tour worksites and see best practices in health and safety, up close and personal.

This is your chance to meet the best and brightest practitioners of your profession, from all corners of the globe.

Be inspired by keynote speaker Stephen Lewis, whose career has included labour mediation, political activism and United Nations envoy for HIV/AIDS in Africa.

Network with the inspectorate of the Canadian province of Ontario, and learn from them how the province is reducing workplace injuries by 20 per cent, in a unique public-private partnership.

See firsthand how health and safety is practised in the real world, at several of Ontario's foremost businesses. Tour a "live" worksite, accompanied by health and safety experts. (Tour numbers are strictly limited, so register early to ensure your place.)

The week of April 16-20th 2007 is your once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to attend two conferences over five days. On Monday and Tuesday, attend Canada's largest health and safety conference and trade show, "Health & Safety Canada 2007," presented by the Industrial Accident Prevention Association. On Wednesday, IAPA shares the stage with IALI at joint sessions. On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, "From compliance to high performance" offers global perspectives on the themes of: regional cooperation; modernizing the labour inspectorate; targeted inspection and enforcement; measuring the impact of inspection activities and innovative approaches: from enforcement to high performance.

As chair of IALI Conference 2007, I look forward to welcoming you to Toronto, Ontario, Canada in April!

Helle Tosine

Assistant Deputy Minister
Ontario Ministry of Labour

DAY 3

From IALI President Michele Patterson:

IALI IS WORKING HARD to extend its activities across the globe. As the first IALI conference to be held in North America, our Toronto conference promises to be a great experience and we are most grateful to the Ontario Ministry of Labour and IAPA for hosting this event, and to the ILO for their continued support of IALI's work.

I am particularly looking forward to building on our discussions in Beijing in 2006, to further develop a global code of ethics for labour inspection—a key IALI objective. I look forward to seeing you there!

WORKSITE TOURS: An IALI First! For details, see Page 10.

Innovative Approaches: From Enforcement to High Performance and Regional Cooperation

How regional co-operation, partnerships and corporate social responsibility have played significant roles in reducing injury rates. Sessions include experiences from across the world, from different sectors and perspectives and from growing economies. Other sessions address emerging areas, such as inspection challenges during pandemics; there will also be forums demonstrating how employers, employees and government are working together to develop standards.

Modernizing the Labour Inspectorate

The changing nature of work has required inspectorates to restructure and strategically reassess how they deliver their services and build capacity. These sessions will include examples of best practices in modernizing the inspectorate, and hiring and training inspectors. Also included will be perspectives from international business, workers and inspectors on how to best address the challenges of working with specification-based and performance-based standards, towards the common outcome of injury reduction.

Targeted Inspection and Enforcement

Whether in a developed or a developing country, labour inspectorates do not have sufficient resources to assess regulatory compliance in all workplaces. In this context, inspectorates may direct their resources to those workplaces presenting the highest occupational health and safety risks. These sessions emphasize strategies and methods for targeting inspection and enforcement resources to the highest-risk workplaces.

Measuring the Impact of Labour Inspection Activities

Leading-edge measurement practices including: looking for leading indicators, return on investment (ROI) of inspection resources.

WITNESS FOR THE PROSECUTION

See how a trial is conducted in Ontario • Friday, April 20

What happens in the courtroom when the Ontario Ministry of Labour lays charges under the Occupational Health and Safety Act? How are prosecutions—and defences—conducted? Watch a mock trial, in which a judge, prosecutor, defence counsel and supporting cast, stage a proceeding. See what “due diligence” really is and what it means in a court of law.
